MARYLAND STUDY COMMISSION AND
TASK FORCE REPORTS AT THE
MARYLAND STATE LAW LIBRARY: A CHECKLIST

"law librarians - making information work"

MAY, 1997

PREFACE

The Maryland State Law Library has been collecting and indexing the work by-product of countless numbers of Maryland study commissions or task forces for over one hundred years. These study commissions typically have been created by legislative, executive or judicial action and been given a mandate to study topics covering the entire spectrum of societal, economic and governmental issues. Ordinarily, the end product of task force activity is the issuance of a final report in which that group recommends legislative or other governmental action intended to address issues studied. Often, in addition to a final report, study commissions will have released an interim report and meeting minutes which are a part of this collection.

Though the State Law Library's collection of these reports is not exhaustive, the attached checklist of approximately 1100 reports represents one of the most comprehensive in the state. The checklist, which has been indexed under one hundred seventy-five alphabetically arranged subject headings, lists the title of the report, the Commission's chair, if any, the year of issuance and a classification number assigned to the report. Reports are arranged in chronological order under each subject heading.

Hopefully, this compilation, which will be updated annually, will assist the legislative history researcher in identifying possible clues in the hunt for intent behind state legislative enactments.

Special recognition goes to library staff who have acquired and nurtured this special collection, particularly, Ruth Hodgson. Shirley Rittenhouse is credited with providing access to the collection through the creation of detailed cataloging records and Ruth Henderson for the painstaking data entry and numerous revisions and quality control of the inventory itself.
